FREE EXPERT ADVICE
ON HEARING CARE

Dear Dr. Becker,
I have hearing aids that have Bluetooth, but I am worried if I connect them to my phone, I will mess up the settings or cause issues with my phone. Do you think it would be beneficial for me to consider using my hearing aids with my phone?

– Ted W.

Dear Ted,
Thank you for your question. It's completely understandable to have concerns about connecting your hearing aids to your phone, especially if you're unfamiliar with how the Bluetooth functionality works.

Bluetooth connectivity is designed to be easy to use, and many modern hearing aids are built to pair seamlessly with smartphones. By connecting your hearing aids to your phone, you can access several helpful features. For example, you can stream phone calls, music, and even video content directly to your hearing aids, enhancing sound clarity and making listening more comfortable. Some hearing aids also have dedicated apps that allow you to adjust settings like volume, bass, and treble, which can be incredibly convenient.

To address your concerns: Connecting your hearing aids to your phone typically won't mess with your settings or cause problems with the phone itself. Hearing aids are designed to work as accessories, much like Bluetooth headphones or speakers. And in fact, it can improve your listening experience and provide you with more control over your hearing aids' settings. If you ever feel unsure, don't hesitate to ask for help from your audiologist.
